

Kevin J. O'Shea

As Deputy Director of the National Law Center for Inter-American Free Trade, Kevin O'Shea has worked closely with, among others, the Organization of American States, the Inter-American Development Bank, national governments throughout the Americas, and the private sector on law reform and modernization to promote economic development and build trade capacity in the region. He holds an undergraduate degree from Brown University and a law degree from Boalt Hall at the University of California at Berkeley.