

Everett Wohlers

Everett Wohlers is an independent consultant specializing in business entity and secured transactions law and filing office operations. He has 30 years of experience in the operation and development of business entity and secured transaction filing offices. His principal client group consists of the multi-lateral development banks, USAID and their prime contractors, though he has consulted directly with governments and multi-national organizations in his prior employment situation. He has extensive experience in developing legislation, regulations and business design for filing office operations. Prior to becoming a consultant, he served for over 20 years as the director of the filing office in a US state and 5 ½ years as an executive in a company that developed filing office technology systems. He is a past president of the International Association of Commercial Administrators, the professional association for directors of filing offices for secured transactions and business entities. He was a co-founder and director of the Article 9 Filing Project, the organization that provided drafting input for the filing provisions of Revised Article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code, which is the US model secured transactions law. He was an advisor for the model secured transactions law of the Organization of American States, and wrote a related professional journal article as a guideline for filing provisions of secured transaction laws. He has done consulting work in Guatemala, Egypt, Sri Lanka, Cambodia, Vietnam, Fiji Islands, Georgia, Peoples Republic of China, the Russian Federation, Federated States of Micronesia and the West Bank and Gaza, and has provided advice on other international projects. He has a law degree (JD) and MBA and MPA degrees.
