- c. Fellows in the masters degree programs shall receive from the IACD a stipend (financial support to cover living expenses) and other allowances (health insurance and books) in accordance with the established IACD rates for the duration of the program, up to a maximum of two academic years. George Washington University will provide a full fellowship for the balance of the program for Fellows who have then passed their qualifying exam or equivalent and remain as full time students. That fellowship may be in the form of a scholarship grant, a paid teaching assistantship, a paid research assistantship, or a combination of all three. Where the Fellow, having passed the qualifying exams or equivalent, is enrolled on a part-time basis after the first two years, George Washington University will cover applicable tuition and customary and usual fees, depending on the availability of funds.
